They are good sheep of Christ’s flock—even exemplary, I must say frankly, in terms of their zeal, and rare in today’s world for their zealous and constant hearing of my teachings. Notes	Sunday	Monday	Tuesday
	“Then, calling to help him without whom we can do nothing, I told them (through an interpreter) that there is no other God, than the one whom we—and many others—worship. I told them who this God is, what he had created, what pleases him, and what displeases him. Finally, I told them that man was created not simply for a temporal life here but for life eternal, and what we must do in order to receive this blessed eternity. Having taught them thus I asked what they thought. They replied that now they believed. Afterwards I told them about what they must do and ended by telling them that they would receive no gifts. They replied, “We require none.” —St. Innocent of Alaska

NOVEMBER 2024

Notes	Sunday	Monday	Tuesday
	“When its pleased this holy body [the Holy Synod] to have my bishop choose a presbyter for the newly-illuminated Christians on Unalaska Island, I was among those called to the ministry, but being terrified by its difficulties, I grew faint-hearted and evaded it. Our merciful Lord, however, did not allow my carnal, earthly will to contradict his heavenly destinies. The bishop himself called the ministry he set before me “apostolic,” but I paid no attention to its importance. Then, in the presence of my bishop, the simple tales . . . about the Aleuts’ zeal for the Christian faith changed all my thoughts in a single moment . . .” —St. Innocent of Alaska
